

Obsessing after Infidelity: The Value of Obsessing about an Affair

---

with Dr. Ellyn Bader

*The Couples Institute &
The Developmental Model of Couples Therapy*

Here Is What We Will Cover Today

---

The Value of Rumination and Obsessing

When to Decide about Staying Together

Video Demonstration -4 Year Affair with Nanny

Laying a Strong Foundation for the Work

How Partners Push Growth in Each Other

How Easy is it to Fall in Love?

For some couples, falling in love is intense and the decision to become a couple is easy.

For others, it is far more difficult as they thoughtfully consider challenging differences in religion, culture, social class, child-rearing,, where to live, in-law problems, etc.- They have overcome a lot

Monogamous partnerships are still the majority

---

Today some couples explore

Polyamory

Open types of relationships

The majority worldwide still live in

Monogamous relationships

When the decision to commit is made and monogamy is chosen, the couple draws a boundary around the “two of them” as a couple.

In today's world of cell phones, text messages and emails, it has become much easier for partners to unearth infidelity – and to be able to follow the communication trail between lovers.

Discovering Infidelity

When one monogamous partner discovers that the other has been unfaithful, it is a violation of that commitment and the decision to be monogamous.

The commitment has been disrupted and a boundary has been violated.

What once seemed secure is no longer secure

---

The disruption of an affair is the violation of dreams, goals and decisions

interdependency

family

teamwork

partnership

all are potentially lost

One partner has made a unilateral choice to terminate an equilateral decision

---

This new decision disrupts the attachment and substantial questions arise

“ Will it happen again?

“ Will there be other unilateral decisions that affect me deeply in which I will not have a say?

Inevitable questions surface

---

- Are we going to stay together or separate?
- Will I ever be able to trust what you tell me again?
- Are we a couple or aren't we?
- Is this the end of our relationship?
- Does the affair partner know more than I do?
- Who else knew about the affair?
- Will you continue to lie and keep secrets from me?
- Was there ever anything between us?

Obsessing about the details

---

Very often the betrayed partner
can't stop obsessing
about details and wanting to know everything about what occurred.

What we know about Paul's Couple
Long-term Conflict Avoidant Marriage
Infidelity Lasted 4 Plus Years
Infidelity was with Nanny/Friend
Wife had Breast Cancer
Double Mastectomy
Therapy Delayed

Notable Points from First Section of Video

---

? Aligning with struggles that the wife had over the last few years. And she can't get images out of her head

? Assess Motivation-Look for commitment to do the work.

? Deciding about the future comes at the end not the beginning

? Assess the types of lies

All questions that existed before the couple formed come back again. This time the challenge is intensified because there are many more interdependencies, as well as having children together.

Each partner must re-decide whether they want to reinvest.

Do they want to invest in therapy?

Do they want to recommit to the marriage?

Notable Points from Second Section of Video

Rumination is a good thing. It will inform our work.

4 powerful things she is thinking about

Bring the concerns into here and now work.

Beginning confrontation of their conflict avoidance-That is why you are here

Karen's Questions

---

- Why didn't I notice? What did I miss?
- Why would she betray me?
- Where did they meet?
- Why wasn't she taking care of our kids?

Obsessing about the details

---

Sessions will revolve around questions like:

Where did you meet?
Did you meet with
our friends/kids?

How many times
were you together?

What did she/he have that I don't have?

What were you thinking
when you wrote this email (or that text)?

What gifts did you give?

What kind of sex happened? And where?

For you to keep positive momentum going, it helps a lot to know what types of lies were told and also when obsessing is valuable and when it's not.

So when is it
valuable to obsess about the details of a partner's affair?

Notable Points from Third Section of Video

---

- 1. Ellyn begins testing what they can handle.
- 2. His shame and feeling like a bad guy are preventing self-confrontation.
- 3. What she is angry about will push his growth.
- 4. How being direct externalizes her rumination

Obsessing can be valuable

---

Obsessing and pursuing details can actually be very helpful for betrayed partners to:

Know what is lost and what they are grieving.

Get important questions answered directly and honestly.

Externalize intrusive thoughts and images and get some reality testing. It stops projection and blown up distortions/ fantasies. It also begins to change the conflict and intimacy avoidant pattern.

Obsessing can be valuable

Obsessing and pursuing details can actually be very valuable to:

- ? Start putting a clear boundary back around the primary relationship.
- ? Create shared understanding about what actually happened at confusing times in the past.
- ? Learn that the infidelity was not personal.
- ? Provide a roadmap through the trauma and put an end to the deception and feeling of craziness.

In some situations, getting the details reveals that the affair took place in the context of a good marriage and actually “was not personal”.

Ongoing obsessing is NOT valuable in other ways

---

- ?? It enables the betrayed partner to remain distant and avoid looking at his/her own issues.
- ?? The betrayed partner's vulnerability stays hidden.
- ?? It may perpetuate the same distance that was a catalyst for the affair.
- ?? It can maintain keeps Persecutor-Victim dynamics.
- ?? It may result in the betrayed partner re-traumatizing himself or herself with no relief or repair.

When obsessing about the details of an affair is not handled well, hostile, persecutory questioning and stagnated therapy will result.

---

When you are confronted with ongoing obsession, you walk a delicate line. To maintain momentum, you must be able to support the positive aspects of uncovering details while actively interrupting the processes that are destructive.

---

It takes practice to learn to confront the patterns that maintain regression, while simultaneously holding both partners.

---

The decision to re-commit is only possible after deep soul searching, intense dialogue and the confrontation of issues such as narcissism, neediness, lie-inviting dynamics, shame and trauma.

---

Notable Points from Last Section of Video

---

- ? Reinforcement of we will be dealing with hard emotions- Therapist can handle this.
- ? Confirming the commitment to do the work
- ? Why you are scared is not about her anger.
- ? Her anxious rumination has moved to awareness of her anger

People wonder

“Will I really get personal attention?”

---

“The way this course is structured offers the opportunity for growth that isn't likely available in many training courses, on-line or otherwise. I haven't had this kind of experience since my Gestalt Training many years ago when I started out as a baby therapist, and in that training the group met in person for 3 and 4 days at a clip, living and training together in a big house.

My gratitude to Ellyn for creating this course as she has.

Ann Veilleux, MSW, LCSW, Madison, Wisconsin

What One Colleague Said...

“ I want to thank you for all that you have taught me and for my new found confidence to work with couples.

This program has not only influenced my work with couples but fundamentally changed how I view my own relationship with my husband and even my kids.

Marine Green
